Agnew Says Foe Won't Free POWs for Firm Pullout Date

By William Chapman
WASHINGTON, May 17 (WP).—President Spiro T. Agnew today said that a date for withdrawal from Vietnam will not be met with demands for concessions, rather than the release of our men.

Agnew Sees 'Is' Combat Over by Fall

WASHINGTON, May 17 (UPI).—Secretary Stanley R. Resor said today that by summer the United States will be "in a position to have no significant ground combat activity in Vietnam."

Resor Sees 'Is' Combat Over by Fall

Resor, who returned May 5 on a two-week inspection tour of South Vietnam and Korea, told news that 70 percent of U.S. forces had been withdrawn from the war and the ground role taken over by South Vietnamese.

34 Battalions

Resor said that while total force levels in Vietnam were "well below their peak," the "crawl rate of combat units" exceeded that of support.

U.S. Forces Remaining

Mr. Resor said operations would be largely limited to "defensive." He said this includes squad and platoon units, and that units would not be sitting passively at their posts.

Stockholm Tree Lovers Gain Reprieve for Elms Till Fall

STOCKHOLM, May 17 (AP)—Conservationists today won a reprieve for a grove of century-old elm trees, scene of pitched battles last week over a City Council decision to cut them down.

Executive Councilor Hjalmar Meir said after several hours' debate in the City Council that the felling of the elms would be postponed at least until autumn.

"Many councilors have received threats of murder and violence," he explained. "This reprieve will give the various groups involved time to consider all aspects of the situation."

At the elm grove, thousands of bystanders and conservationists, who have mounted a round-the-clock guard on the trees for nearly a week, cheered the decision.

ning of an increased campaign for environment preservation.

"We are going to continue the fight and, with the elms as our symbol, take in much broader issues," he said. "If the government thinks that by giving us this lollipop it is going to shut us off it is mistaken. The country is wide awake now."

The conservationists earlier had reached a truce with hands of trouble-seeking hoodlums—rappare—with whom they had fought.

The truce specified that the two sides would join forces to pursue two goals: the preservation of the elms and the construction of a recreation center for the "rappare."

Cardinal Agagianian

Gregory Cardinal Agagianian, Headed Catholic Mission Unit

ROME, May 17 (NYT)—Gregory Peter Cardinal Agagianian, 75, who was a leading non-Italian candidate for the throne of Peter as one of the most respected and scholarly members of the Sacred College of Cardinals, died here last night.

He retired last October after being chief of the worldwide missions of the Roman Catholic Church for ten years.

Twice in the last 13 years, Cardinal Agagianian was considered the leading candidate for the papacy if a non-Italian were to be elected.

He made a major impact on the development of the church and its role in the newly developing nations.

He lived almost his entire life in exile from his native Russia because of his work in the Catholic Church yet served as the spiritual leader for thousands of Armenian Catholics who continued to practice their faith in the southern areas of the Soviet Union.

ed to his native Caucasus to find his home province, like all Russia, torn by the Bolshevik Revolution. But, although tormented by local militant atheists, who slaughtered more than 100 priests and 30,000 members of the community, he served as pastor in Tiflis for two years before being recalled to Rome.

In 1921, he was appointed vice-rector of the Armenian College in Rome. In 1932, he became rector and in 1935 was consecrated a titular bishop.

Elected Patriarch

In 1937, Avedis Peter XIV Arpiarian, patriarch of Cilicia of the Armenians, died. The Armenian hierarchy in communion with the Holy See elected Cardinal Agagianian as his successor. He assumed the name Gregory Peter XV. Beirut became his new headquarters and his flock was scattered throughout the Soviet Union, the Middle East, France, the United States and South America.

Pope Pius XII conferred the red hat on Cardinal Agagianian in his first consistory in February, 1946, making him, at 50 years of age, the youngest member of the Sacred College.

The cardinal spoke fluent Armenian, Russian, Italian, French, English and Latin and learned German, Spanish, classical Greek and Arabic.

On June 18, 1958, Pope Pius XII appointed him pro-rector of the Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith. Pope John XXIII made him prefect of the congregation.

French Restaurateur Adopts U.S. System of Franchising

PARIS, May 17 (AP)—A Frenchman has launched a campaign to become his country's Howard Johnson, and laced it with attacks on American life and American habits.

Jean Loistier, 40, took two full pages of advertising in the current issue of the newsmagazine L'Express to announce that he is planning to revolutionize eating along French highways while giving countrymen with $100,000 to chip in a chance at some of the profits.

Mr. Loistier said he intended to franchise restaurants like his own chain of ten that have "given a lesson in profit-making to the French hotel business—without borrowing anything from American ways."

The restaurants, circular white-washed buildings covered with thatch, are supposed to be a cut above usual highway snackbars. "I made a little market study," Mr. Loistier said, "and I found out that there are more and more French people in a hurry, but they won't stand for being treated like Americans. They want to eat quickly and lightly, but well."

Mr. Loistier explained that the restaurants were round because he liked them that way. "If New York is so hard to live in, it's because there are no round places here," he said.

All his restaurants, Mr. Loistier went on, would be without plastic or neon. "French people want something nice," his ad said.

In a country that probably takes eating more seriously than any other in the world, restaurant chains are practically nonexistent. Mr. Loistier says he'll serve steaks for eight francs and a cheese tray for three francs.

Despite the mocking anti-American tone, Mr. Loistier's ad committed what is considered by French nationalists to be a mortal language sin. Mr. Loistier used the English word "franchising" to explain what he was proposing to do. The French language provides only inadequate translations for the American concept, regardless of what the French may think of American living and mealtime habits.

FIERY LANDSCAPE—An area priest watching a five-meter-high wall of lava advancing yesterday toward the village of Fornazzo, on the slopes of Mount Etna.

Lava Destroys Trees, Crops; Advances on Village on Etna

CATANIA, Sicily, May 17 (AP)—Fuming lava devastated some of the richest farmland on the slopes of Mount Etna today.

One of two main streams of lava inched its way through orchards and fields belonging to the village of Sant'Alfio. Although only a few outlying farm houses have been destroyed, damage to crops has been widespread.

A citizens' committee asked the Sant'Alfio parish priest to parade the status of the village's patron saint to the point where the lava is closest to the town. The flow is now little more than a mile away. The villagers say this act halted the lava during a similar eruption of Mount Etna in 1928. The priest said he would ask the bishop of nearby Acireale for permission.

The lava advancing toward Sant'Alfio was also threatening a provincial road. It was one of two lava flows that burst out of a new eruption of Etna one week ago.

The other flow is confined in a river bed and is expected to pass between the villages of Sant'Alfio and Fornazzo without # Bonn Ends Pr Of Kiesinger (C Comment on!

BONN, May 17 (AP)—Bonn district attorney said today that it has investigated a charge that Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger had perjured himself by saying that he did not know the Nazi extermination program up to the time of the trial. The former chancellor no reference to the time that year, the spokesman said.

Mr. Kiesinger, chancellor 1966 to 1969, was a member of the Nazi party and won the propaganda section of the 1933 election. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison in 1948 for his role in the Nazi regime.

40 Foreigners In Rome Jail Stage Strike

Detention in Drug Cases Is Attacked

ROME, May 17 (AP)—Forty foreigners in Rome's Rebibbia jail started a hunger strike today to protest their arrest and months of pre-trial detention for the possession of small quantities of drugs.

The foreigners, from 13 countries, addressed a message to the Justice Ministry listing their complaints in a controversy that has been debated in parliament and is now before Italy's supreme court.

The prisoners, whose names were not revealed, belong to a growing number of foreigners—mostly tourists—who have been arrested on charges of possession and use of drugs. Arrest for these charges is mandatory in Italy. Because of drug arrests, there are ten times as many foreigners in jail in Italy now than there were two years ago.

The foreign prisoners are mostly youths. In their protest today, they said that they would not eat food or take part in their daily recreation until their demands are met.

No Distinctions

They said that Italian law "makes no distinction between the possession of drugs for personal use or for sale to others, and no distinction between the various types of drugs."

The complaint also called "unjust and inhuman" mandatory arrest on these charges "and pre-trial detention which goes on for an average eight to nine months as the investigating magistrate has ten months' time to turn in his conclusions."

The prisoners demanded that they be released immediately on bail.

The controversy has been brought before Italy's supreme court by a lower court. The lower court questioned the constitutionality of the law on drugs, citing several specialists of foreigners who had been arrested because they carried or had in their homes a few grams of hashish.

These foreigners were all held in jail for months before trial. All protested that in their countries the charges filed against them in Italy would have led to a fine but not to their arrest.

Prison officials said that the prisoners who started the hunger strike came from Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Egypt, France, West Germany, Britain, Lebanon, the Netherlands, Somalia, Switzerland and the United States. They were believed to include both men and women.

Bonn Taxi Driver Killed in Collision With Scheel's Car

BONN, May 17 (AP)—Foreign Minister Walter Scheel escaped serious injury today when his limousine collided with a taxi near the Bonn airport, killing the taxi driver, West German police report.

The Foreign Ministry said that Mr. Scheel sustained a bleeding head wound and a cut hand. His wife was treated for a pulled muscle and light shock.

They were being driven to the airport to board a special flight for Bucharest when the accident occurred. The ministry said that they were able to continue and they boarded the plane, which left at 6:30 p.m.

Mr. Scheel was going to Bucharest for talks with Romanian government leaders. President Gustav Heinemann of West Germany began an official four-day visit there today, the first West German president to visit a Warsaw Pact nation.

Liberal Prelate Named by Pope as Lisbon Patriarch

LISBON, May 17 (NYT)—A young, active bishop was named patriarch of Lisbon last week, inaugurating what liberal Roman Catholics believe will be a new era for their church in Portugal.

The Most Rev. Antonio Ribeiro, 42, titular bishop of Tizlava and auxiliary of Lisbon, succeeds Manuel Cardinal Cerejeira, 82, who has been the spiritual leader of this Catholic country since 1929.

The nomination of Bishop Ribeiro as patriarch was welcomed by Roman Catholic liberals as a significant step toward the renovation of what is considered one of the most conservative churches in Europe.

The succession was an extremely delicate issue since the church here is subject to profound strains between the dominant old guard and the increasingly impatient reformers.

Giscard Warns on Inflation; Renault Workers Reject Offer

PARIS, May 17 (AP)—Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing tonight said that inflation is a major problem facing France. He called on producers to hold the price line and labor to refrain from making excessive demands.

In an unannounced television appeal, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said that the government wants to avoid imposing controls as long as methods of persuasion have not been completely exhausted.

He said that sharply rising prices were due to excessive increases in wages. He said that wage hikes must be reduced to more moderate proportions.

The statement seemed to be a clear warning to workers of the giant nationalized Renault automobile works, which has been shut down by a strike at the Le Mans parts factory. A settlement was worked out by company and union officials last night, but it was rejected by the plant workers at Le Mans today.

A company statement tonight said "Taking into account the necessity to keep close watch on the financial balance of the enterprise, the management does not see what new negotiations could lead to."

The management said that the "2,000 specialized workers in the Le Mans plant, representing only 20 percent of the personnel at this plant and 2 percent of the company's employees" had thrown all the rest out of work.

Outside of the danger from inflation, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said that the French economy is in good shape, with a strong growth rate and foreign trade comfortably balanced.

4th Arrest Made In the Bombing of Pirate Radio Ship

AMSTERDAM, May 17 (AP)—Amsterdam water police said here today they have arrested a man who, they believe, masterminded the bomb attack on the pirate radio ship Mebo-2 off the Dutch coast Saturday.

A 48-year-old radio advertising agent, employed by Radio Veronica, a rival pirate pop station, was arrested on suspicion of provocation of arson, Maj. T.P. Nelissen, police district commander in charge of the investigation, told reporters.

There has been a long-standing feud between Radio Veronica, Europe's oldest pop pirate station, which also operates off the Dutch coast, and Radio Noordsee International, which owns Mebo-2.

The management of Radio Veronica dissociated itself from the action, saying the man acted on his own initiative.

Radio Veronica, in which the arrested man is said to have a substantial interest, had a financial claim on Radio Noordsee International. According to the police, the sabotage of the Mebo-2 was aimed at forcing the radio ship to enter Dutch waters, enabling RNI creditors to seize it.

Three professional divers were arrested yesterday and charged with bombing the ship. They allegedly confessed and implicated the man arrested today.

Chile Wooing East Europe

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 17 (NYT)—Foreign Minister Clodomiro Almeyda is leading a Chilean economic mission on a trip to eight Eastern European countries, including the Soviet Union.

The mission is the first major move by the left-wing administration of President Salvador Allende to increase trade with European socialist markets and to obtain economic aid for Chile's "construction of socialism."

In Moscow, the mission is expected to reach agreement on use of a $30 million line of credit that has been open since 1968, but which went almost unused during Chile's previous Christian Democratic administration.

China Said to Be Producing Jet Fighter of Its Own Design

By William Beecher

WASHINGTON, May 17 (NYT)—Communist China is producing for the first time a jet fighter of its own design, according to senior American analysts.

Heretofore, China has concentrated on producing planes from Russian blueprints obtained before the schism between the two countries in the early 1960s ended their military cooperation.

Chinese copies of the Russian MIG-19 fighter in recent years have been manufactured in such quantity, sources note, that China has even sold some to Pakistan. Officials say China had been producing an estimated 200 MIG-19s a year in a factory near Mukden, in Manchuria.

But the ability to design and put into mass production what experts describe as an essentially all-new airplane, officials say, demonstrates a growing Chinese determination and technological competence to produce not only missiles and nuclear warheads, but also an array of modern conventional arms. Officials also spoke of a new design submarine and a new tank, but declined to provide details.

Twin-Jet Craft

The new plane, designated the F-9 by American analysts, is a twin-jet fighter roughly based on the MIG-19 design, but said to be considerably advanced, and different in important respects from Soviet aircraft.

Sources say China is believed to be turning out the F-9 at a rate of about ten a month.

The F-9 is said to fly at more than twice the speed of sound—roughly 1,400 miles per hour—with a combat radius of 300 to 500 miles. That means it could fly from its base to point 300 to 500 miles away, engage in combat operations there and then return home without refueling.

It is said to be 50 feet long, with a 32-foot wingspread, and to weigh about 22,000 pounds. It is reported to be equipped to carry rapid-fire 30-mm machine guns, bombs, rockets and air-to-ground missiles.

Previously China has produced MIG-17 and MIG-19 fighters, the Tu-16 medium bomber, MIG-15 and Yak-18 trainers, Mi-4 helicopters and An-2 biplanes, all from Russian blueprints, sources say. Some reports have talked of construction of the Soviet-designed MIG-21 fighter, but most American specialists tend to discredit these reports.

Rather, they say, at one point the Chinese developed an interim design, the F-8, with a maximum speed of more than 1,400 mph. Only four F-8s were believed built and at least one of these crashed.

Forerunner of F-9

This plane was equipped with advanced engines and other improved components and became the F-9N which has now gone into mass production, military sources say.

According to the London-based Institute for Strategic Studies, the Red Chinese Air Force numbers about 2,800 combat aircraft, including, besides planes of its own manufacture, a unspecified number of Tu-98 and Tu-4 bombers supplied by Russia before the break in relations.

The F-9, sources say, can operate at altitudes above 50,000 feet. But while maneuverable and fast, experts say it probably would be outperformed by the Soviet MIG-21 or the American F-4 Phantom. The latter is believed in particular to have much better radar and air-to-air weapons systems.

The MIG-21 has a combat radius of about 375 miles, the Phantom about 900 miles.

One American specialist said: "The F-9 is an impressive aircraft, particularly for a country developing its own design and production capability. We can now look for slow but steady improvements."

Pope Paul Calls Mass Media Vital to Man's Development

VATICAN CITY, May 17 (Reuters)—Pope Paul VI said today that the very future of man was at stake in the way he exploited modern communications media.

In a message marking World Communications Day, Sunday, the Pope appealed to all users of the media, including the press, radio and television, to help promote world unity and brotherhood.

The Pope said he did not underestimate the tragic tensions existing between societies and persons, between industrialized and developing nations, and between supporters of opposing ideologies and political systems.

"Conflicts which often provoke increasing repercussions all over the world continue to create dangerous rifts and translate themselves, alas, into acts of violence and warlike situations," he said.

"We certainly cannot expect the press, the radio, the television and the cinema to minimize them or pass over them in silence."

The Pope warned that there was a temptation to use these powerful audio-visual means to aggravate tensions, discords and division, pushing them to their extreme consequences. Instead, the media should be used to help create a spirit of solidarity among men, he said.

Cycle Race Fatal to Child

Foreign exchange has been a businessman's headache long enough!

Let's not kid ourselves. When dealing with so many foreign exchange regulations and problems, no bank can wave a magic wand and make all your headaches vanish. But we believe a bank can—and should—do everything in its power to help.

We do. We have branches and offices of (subsidiaries (48 to be exact) all over the world to keep us abreast of local market (information and regulations.)

And Cenflex—our network of foreign exchange desks in major money capitals—allows us to handle transactions efficiently. With instant access to the varying rates, we can produce the most attractive exchange rates for our clients.

But we do considerably more than this. We'll sit down with you. And listen. And really try to iron out your own particular problems.

If it's a time of monetary unrest, for instance, and you ask us to evaluate your risks, we'll show you all the alternatives open to you. Then let you decide which suits your own business condition best.

We might even suggest you not exchange your funds at current rates. Or give you alternate banking methods which will do the same job as an exchange of funds, at less cost to you.

We might not be able to end all the headaches of foreign exchange. But we'll do all in our power to ease the pain.

BRIDGE — By Alan Truscott

TAIPEI, May 17 (NYT)—The Aces retained the world bridge championship title this afternoon, defeating France in the Bermuda Bowl final by 62 international match points, 243-181.

The winners were Jim Jacoby, Bob Wolff, Mike Lawrence, Bob Goldman, Bill Eisenberg, Bob Hamman, all of Dallas. The non-playing captain was Oswald Jacoby, also of Dallas. The French team included Dr. Pierre Jais, Roger Tresselt, Henri Svarc, Jean-Michel Boulenger, Jean-Marc Roudinesco and Jean-Louis Stoppa, all of Paris.

The Aces, who are the world's only professional bridge team, showed convincing form in repeating their 1970 victory in Stockholm. They built up a lead of 37 points in the first session of the final Saturday night, and never seemed in danger of losing the lead. Twice in play yesterday the French cut the lead back to less than 20 points, but each time the Aces regained the lost ground. They began the final session today with a lead of 45 points, and at one point the French had reduced this to 29. But the Aces moved steadily ahead in the final deals. The Jacoby-Wolff and Goldman-Lawrence partnerships played almost throughout for the American team, and both pairs were steady and accurate. For the losers the best performance was by Svarc and Boulenger, who played all but 16 of the deals.

The famous Jais-Tresselt partnership was somewhat erratic in their slam bidding during the final. They failed to reach some very desirable slam contracts, but got to a distinctly inferior one as shown in the diagram.

Wolff and Jacoby for the Aces were content to play the North-South cards in four spades, and made exactly 10 tricks. Jais as North and Tresselt as South, were much more ambitious.

The jump shift to three clubs in the European style, and would be chosen by few American experts. When North then supported spades, South perhaps visualized a better fit in that suit than existed. Fearing a diamond lead, he made a false cue-bid of five diamonds. North might have been worried by the danger of losing two heart tricks, but he boldly bid six clubs, hoping to play in his long suit. However, South converted to six spades.

Bob Hamman as West did not allow himself to be inhibited by the diamond cue-bid. He led the diamond queen, and South found that his judgment had been right in a sense: the diamond lead was the one he did not want, for it removed a vital entry from the dummy.

At this point South had no choice. He drew trumps in three rounds, hoping for a three-two break. That succeeded. Next he finessed the club queen. That succeeded. Finally he played the club ace from dummy, and when the king obligingly fell from the West hand he made all 13 tricks. France gained 11 points on the deal.

DOWN THE RABBIT HOLE
Adventures and Misadventures in the Realm of Children's Literature.

By Selma G. Lanes. Atheneum, 239 pp. $7.95.
Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

T.S. Eliot once remarked that his ideal audience would be made up of illiterates. Presumably they would receive his work with open minds, unblinded by preconceptions. Unfortunately, only children's books are read this way—and we can see what Eliot meant. If we remember nothing else of our reading, there are always those first few stories, like First Love, never to be forgotten. How do we use this time when opportunity? Not as well as we might, says Selma Lanes, and she goes on to show how difficult it is to do justice to a child's imagination. Some of us err in the direction of sentimentality. After lavishing infinite care on our children's diets when they are infants, we are content to feed them nothing but sweets when they are old enough for books. Some of us are too didactic. The books we choose for our children are about as much fun as toilet training. Nor are "emancipated" parents invariably wiser: Mrs. Lanes tells of an otherwise sensible mother who preserved the remains of her child's umbilical cord, so that she could paste it in a memory book and present it to him when he was fully grown. Here is the ultimate "realism" in a child's book.

Energy, verifiability, sensibility. This is a large order, but it's what we should be aiming for, says Mrs. Lanes in Down the Rabbit Hole. And some writers are. She describes a story by Uri Shulevitz that imaginatively joins the old and the new—the escape from reality and the affirmation of it. It is called "One Monday Morning" and in it a king, queen, prince, knight and palace retinue—all in full pomp—proceed along a shabby street to a rundown tenement, where they huddle in a hallway to look for the doorbell of the little boy who inexplicably came to visit each day of the week. In a story by Isaac Bashevis Singer, Princess Nedka rejects her latest suitor "because his boots are foolish."

Maurice Sendak has a story that begins where most leave off: its dog heroine, Jenny, has everything and is discontented, because, as she says, "There must be more to life than having everything." When she gives up all her comforts in idealistic renunciation, she discovers that "There must be more to life than having nothing."

In a witty review of the old versus the new, Mrs. Lanes betrays her own nostalgia for that world of certainties that has all but disappeared. Kate Greenaway, her favorite 19th-century author, has the artist's essentially tragic view; her books express the poignancy of life's evanescence in the act of recapturing childhood. Mrs. Lanes has doubts about the dazzling pictorial emphasis in some of the new books. They are not books so much as "products" of the illegitimate children of advertising and technology. At their best, such books may create a generation that is verbally retarded and visually advanced. When she praises Mrs. Lane goes all-out, making Maurice Sendak the William Blake of children's books, and giving E. B. White's mouse-child, Stuart Little, almost as much symbolic significance as

JUMBLE — that scrambled word game

Put your dog on. Ruff wants to bark at him!

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

YURMK

CROUTY

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

The Hole Truth

WASHINGTON—My colleague Russell Baker of The New York Times wrote a couple of weeks ago that the reason the Soviets were digging large new holes around Moscow is because they believed that American pot holes were really dug for our new missile sites.

For the first time since I've known him, Baker was wrong. It isn't our pot holes that the Russians are worried about, it's our subways.

I discovered this the other day sitting on a park bench across from the White House with a Soviet spy named Nicolai.

Buchwald

"Why would a congressman from Kentucky have anything to say about a subway for Washington?"

"Because," I said, "in Washington everybody from every place in the country has something to say about Washington except the people who live here. Would you believe we have a congressman who lives in South Carolina who has more power than the mayor?"

"You are a capitalist liar," Nicolai said. "No one in the Kremlin would believe that story. Your defense people are very clever. First they have Congress announce they are going to build a subway. Then when you get your holes dug just the right size for your missiles, Congress announces it will not give any money to complete the subway."

"Nicolai," I said nervously. "I know it doesn't make sense for Congress to let people start building a subway and then refuse to give the money to complete it. But that's the way it is done in the District of Columbia, and you have to believe me."

"My report to the Kremlin still stands," Nicolai said. "If you can prove to me that Washington will have a subway in the next 10 years, I will be happy to change my intelligence."

"I can't prove it, Nicolai," I said, perspiring. "We may or may not have a subway, depending on what happens in the Senate on the subway appropriations bill."

Nicolai declared, "We will continue digging holes in Moscow until you people stop digging holes in Washington. Your subway story was a good try, but it never fooled us. We were onto it from the beginning."

I left Nicolai and ran to the nearest phone and called Congressman Natcher's office. "For God's sake," I pleaded, "release the subway funds before the Russians install a whole new generation of intercontinental nuclear missiles!"

"Russian missiles?" the person on the other end of the phone said. "We're sorry. That's not our committee."

'They came from France, where the futurist movement started, from Israel, from Argentina, from Britain, Germany, Canada, from every corner of the United States...'

First Assembly of the World Future Society

By Michael Kernan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The future, that undiscovered country whose border no traveler can reach—because when you get there it's the present—is often more comfortable to contemplate than the here and now. This goes for the first general assembly of the World Future Society, held in Washington this past week, drew 1,000 people instead of the 500 expected.

They came from France, where the futurist movement started, from Israel, from Argentina, from Britain, Germany, Canada, from every corner of the United States, and their diversity, even superficially, was staggering.

There were heads, hundreds of them. There were grey-haired colonial crests. There were combed, glossy executive haircuts and extravagantly proliferating bushy hair that straggled down over collars, hair bound into headbands, hair that languished on shiny furrowed domes.

The diversity ran much deeper than clothes. The futurist society, founded in Washington five years ago, has 8,000 members including social scientists, psychologists, industrialists, educators, government officials, city planners, architects, writers, physicists, biologists, statisticians—and professional futurologists.

A futurologist is a consultant who advises school boards, manufacturers, government agencies, nations—anyone who has the money and vision to hire him. Sometimes he is asked for a specific forecast, but more often he does not attempt to foretell the future in so many words, he tends to present alternatives, explaining why he thinks each will lead and what its effects will be.

Futurists sense that their strength is in this very diversity, for only with a great variety of disciplines can we hope to visualize, much less comprehend, our future, and only with an unprecedented cooperation among these polyglots can we hope to change it.

Time and again during their meeting the futurists demonstrated that their most noticeable weakness is failure to appreciate their own diversity and indeed the infinite variety of the human race:

- Elementary school children, sitting out to build a model city of styrofoam and blocks, were first asked what their ideal city should have in it. They said love. Oh, no, snilled the moderator, that's an intangible, that doesn't count.
- Futurists pay lip service to the imperfections of the Delphi Poll (named for the oracle), but they do not seem to question it seriously. In a demonstration here delegates were given a poll listing 12 possible technological advances and were asked to pick the four most important.
- They chose cheap and clean electric power, increased farm production, mass fertility control via water and food—the only one that snacks at all of Orwell—and people working at home through improved communications. Rejected included underwater cities, high-IQ computers and some other gadgets.

Sounds reasonable. But in an early session W.D. Rowe of the Miltre Corp. had dared to criticize the basic adequacy of the technique.

"We don't live in a surprise-free environment," he said, adding that the systematic cutting out of extremes to seek consensus might sound reasonable but actually can lead to disaster.

Suppose everyone in the room were polled on where they would all be in ten minutes. One person answers: We'll be dead. Since that answer is a minority of one, it would be eliminated from further consideration. "But that's the guy who's got the bomb in his suitcase," said Mr. Rowe, "and he's the guy I'm looking for."

The popular author and socio-economist Robert Theobald—whose talk had to be moved to a larger room when people began sleeping in the emergency exit, sitting in the aisles and taking off their shoes—made the point that we must break away from structured authority, the hierarchy of prestige, and substitute "spatiel" authority based purely on human wisdom.

And possibly the most instructive thing about the entire conference was the way this obscure, far, breakaway from structured authority, began to happen in the meetings themselves.

For instance, during a panel on "Tomorrow's Public Services," chairman John Dixon of the Center for a Voluntary Society spent the first half-hour asking his audience what it wanted. This evolved into a discussion of what is meant by public service in the first place, and over the next half-hour a definition gradually was hammered out.

Item: During a stock-taking session, Michael Mandeville, teaching assistant in political science at the University of Washington, strode up to the mike and said he wanted to destroy the podiums, the rows of chairs and the experts who sat in them, the underdog student-like role into which audiences were being thrust, the status play. "Let's just get together in rooms," he said, "and talk it out."

Diversity

"I'm not a futurist, I'm a humanist," he said. "We're not only a science by courtesy; we're also part art and part cost-effectiveness study."

"We're social scientists, rooted in the here and now, by God, and we deal with contemporary problems," he said.

"I just can't see how you can be a futurist if you're not a futurist," he said.

For our part, we have been riveted to the wire machines for the duration of the safari, following in all its lurid detail the splendidly endless roll of copy devoted to the popular and successful royal tour—which we failed to report, frankly, because we didn't want to spoil you. You've been bricks, though, so herewith an exclusive peek behind the scenes, courtesy of the ever-vigilant United Press International:

During a fun-filled swing through the picturesque Okanagan Valley, reported UPI, "a crowd estimated at over 4,500 greeted Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip and Princess Anne at Kelowna Oval, where Mayor Robert Beth delivered a brief welcoming speech. When the Duke of Edinburgh first mounted the podium, he began to wildly wave his hands. The cue was picked up by the Kelowna Pipe Band and they played the National Anthem. A fun-filled arrangement dedicated to the proposition that Once a Greek, Always a Greek... Several days and many miles later, "Some 5,000 flag-waving persons welcomed the royal visitors to the town of Prince Rupert. After the queen unveiled a plaque to open the new Prince Rupert hospital, the members of the royal family drove to Fisher's Wharf, where they boarded an old steamboat and got the hell out of there, fast!"

DEAG EAGER, the Houston Astros third baseman, hasn't hit many homers this year. On the other hand, he hasn't thrown out many runners, either. Not that he is totally without talent. Questioned the other day by persistent sportswriters as to his strengths and weaknesses, Rader replied: "I think smoking is the thing I do good and most consistently. I just barely ever have an off day smoking. I smoke every day and I smoke consistent. I can't think of anything else I am as consistently good at."
